Assignment 1A: Logo and Style Guide

Introduction to Crystal Nails...

The small business I have decided to redesign a logo for is Crystal Nails based in Leeds, UK. Crystal Nails is a nail and beauty salon who provide a variety of services such as manicures, nail art and pedicures. The company is known for their excellent nail art and the attention to detail within their services. Customers claim the atmosphere of the salon is beautiful, clean and welcoming. Their brand identity is something I took heavily into consideration when creating the logo for their business.

I picked Crystal Nails as the company to redesign a logo for as I felt their previous logo didn't reflect the brand's identity and came across as dull. Moreover, I felt their logo didn't suit the company very well, as it doesn't include the name Crystal Nails or any imagery that suggests it is a beauty salon. I felt the typography within the logo was unclear, so much so I didn't even realise it had the initials 'CN' in the logo until I looked at it for quite some time. Their logo also didn't use the colour pink which was highly used throughout their brand website and social media. My goal was to create a logo which aligned closely with their brand identity using bold brand colours, clear typography and a simplistic style.

The Logo:

Scalable Vector Graphic Software: Illustrator

Sizing and Boundaries

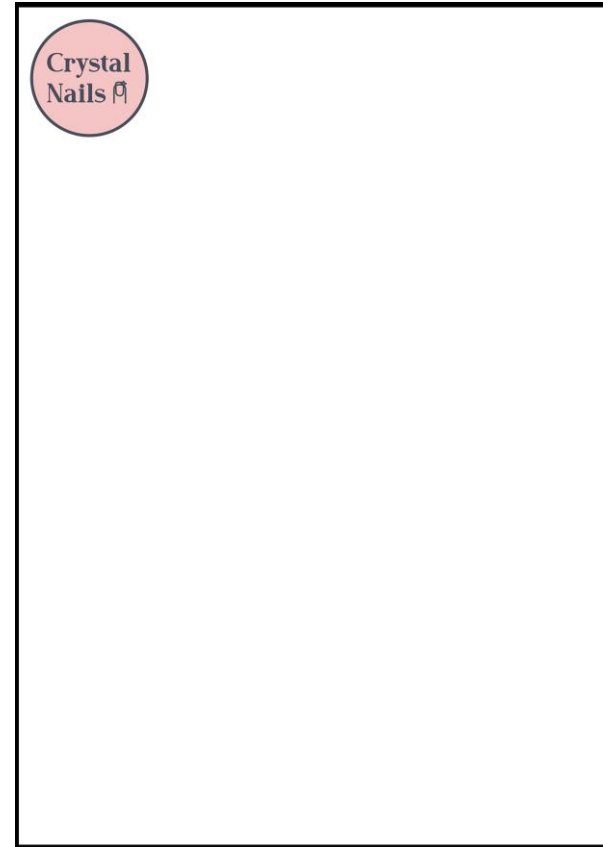

The logo should be presented at a minimum of 4.2cm by 4.2cm. If scaled down any smaller, the logo becomes less readable, and the nail graphic becomes less clear.

The minimum boundary for the logo is 0.5mm by 0.5mm. Meaning, the logo must have 0.5mm of negative space around it. The logo cannot be placed any closer to the edge of a document.

Logo Positioning

The logo is best positioned in the corners of documents as shown in the examples. If the logo is scaled up, it works best aligned in the centre of the page. The logo must not be placed outside of the minimum boundary of 0.5mm from the edge of a document.

Guidelines and Usage

Here are some guidelines of how to use the logo. These visual examples allow users to see what not to do with the logo. These guidelines are important to follow as they ensure the logo is recognisable and used in the same way throughout both physical printed copies and across multi-media platforms.

Do not use filters and effects on the logo.

Do not change the colours of the logo.

Do not change the background shape of the logo.

Do not distort the logo.

Do not crop the logo.

Do not remove background shape of logo.

Logo Silhouettes

In situations where the logo cannot be published or printed in colour, silhouettes can be used. The silhouette with the white font can only be used on black backgrounds.

Colour

There are the two colours used in the logo for Crystal Nails. #F2C4C8 is a shade of pastel pink and #474D59 is a shade of dark grey. The logo uses two colours to allow for clear silhouettes when published without colour.

#F2C4C8

RGB 242, 196, 200

#474D59

RGB 71, 77, 89

Typography

The font used in the logo for Crystal Nails is called 'Fregan Serif Bold'. This is the only font used within the logo. The font used in the logo must not be changed or modified for any purposes.

Assignment 1B: Web Banners

ABSOLUT NATURE.

For this assignment we had to create our own web banners for Absolut Vodka. Through conducting research into their previous marketing campaigns, I gained better understanding of their brand identity and how they market their products. I noticed Absolut Vodka often markets its bottled vodka through bold and minimalist web banners. As a company, they are highly creative within their ad campaigns using a range of colours, themes and styles throughout their visually driven campaigns.

What I liked most about their marketing is their use of playful and artistic imagery. All their designs are instantly recognisable following a consistent patterns such as having the vodka bottle being the main element within their designs. Moreover, their typography is easy to read and has become a key aspect of their brand identity. I felt really inspired to create my own set of web banners for the company and wanted to showcase their brand in a vibrant way. I decided to base my campaign on the theme of nature as I felt it had potential allowing me to explore natural imagery and lots of rich colourful visuals. I feel my designs accomplished an uplifting, refreshing and eye-catching feel. I am really pleased with their outcomes.

All the web banners were created in Photoshop and saved as JPEG to suit the web format. All banners use the colour mode RGB and have been exported at 72 DPI to allow for clear screen viewing. The size of the web banners are 1024x768 pixels. These design requirements allow for clear visual display on each banner.

Assignment 1C: Channel Idents

THE MOVEMENT

For this assignment we were tasked to produce a couple of channel idents for a documentary channel following the theme of our choice. Channel idents are static images which appear within documentaries to break apart scenes. I decided to create a documentary channel called 'The Movement' which is dedicated to exploring dance as a form of art. The documentary recognises how dancing is storytelling and the emotions that go alongside it as a discipline.

I wanted my channel idents to symbolise dance visually using elements such as silhouettes, ballet shoes and ribbons. I wanted to show repetition throughout my design by using multiple ballet shoes and silhouettes to mirror repetition used in dance routines. I created rhythm throughout my pieces having the visual elements move through the idents changing in sizes and composition. I felt both these compositional concepts tied in well to the documentary theme and the name itself 'The Movement'. I wanted my designs to appear cartoon-like and to be simple yet engaging. I feel I have achieved this throughout my pieces.

I created my channel idents in both Illustrator and Photoshop. The ballet shoes and ribbons are scalable vector graphics which I then brought into Photoshop to put together my final design. I used out-sourced free images from Adobe Stock of dancer silhouettes which I put into my second channel ident. I kept the typography on my idents simple as I wanted it to be clear and not to distract from the design. Both my channel idents are PNG, using colour mode RGB, at a resolution of 72 DPI to ensure clear screening.

Assignment 1D: Multiformat Campaign

BROKE in PARIS

For Assignment 1D, we had to create a multi-format campaign for a festival related to a city beginning with the first letter of our last name. 'Broke in Paris' is a budget-focused cultural guide designed for students and young travellers and is run by hostels across the city. It explores creative and affordable ways to experience Paris. The project highlights activities such as free museums, art galleries, walking tours, thrift shopping, hostel hangouts, and picnics along the Seine. It challenges the idea that Paris is only for those with money. Instead, it presents the city as accessible, social and full of low-cost culture. I produced this idea because I wanted to create a festival campaign that felt personal to me. Having visited Paris during the summer while interrailing, I drew on my own photographs and memories. I wanted to design a festival that highlights Paris in a youthful, friendly way and encourages backpackers to visit the city. All designs for this project were created using Photoshop.

The Logo:

Here is the logo design for 'Broke in Paris'. I wanted the design to use bold typography to be clear and recognisable. I feel the simplicity of the logo design works well. I had experimented with a range of imagery and fonts, however thought the logo shown here worked best. The logo is accessible and honest mirroring the idea of doing Paris without pretending. I think the logo feels confident about budget travel and looks as if it has been designed for young people. The colour choices are representative of the French flag's colours: red, white and blue, which is the country where the city is located. I also wanted to ensure the design would work well digitally across marketing and social media. Therefore, I created a logo which would work in both silhouette for print and in colour. I found using more imagery made the design less recognisable when put into a silhouette and reduced clarity which I felt didn't align with the festival's identity. I feel the outcome of my logo is modern, vibrant and practical.

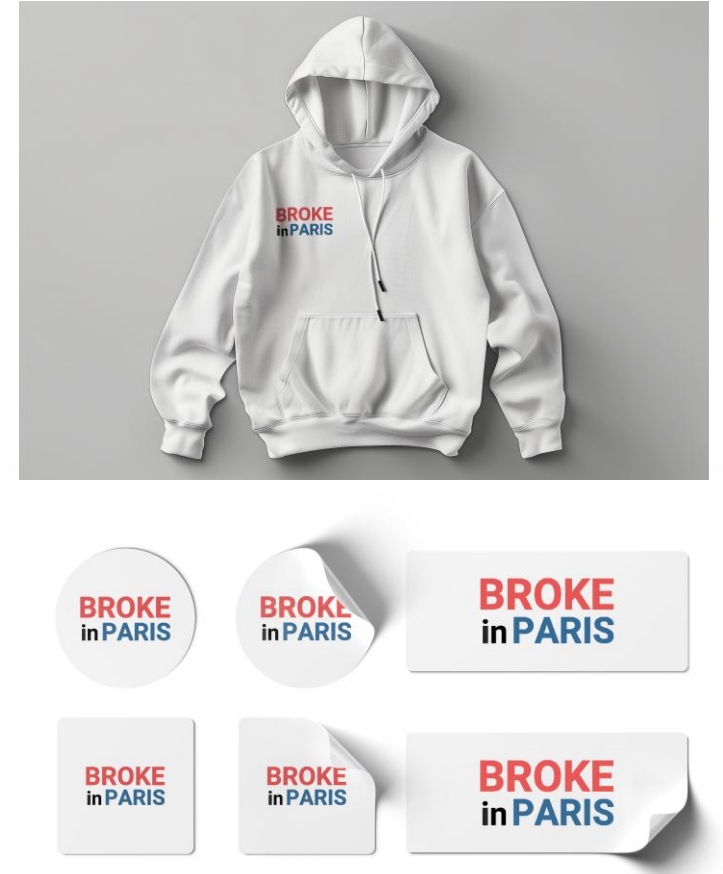

The logo is displayed in two lines. The first line contains the word 'BROKE' in a bold, red, sans-serif font. The second line contains the words 'in PARIS' in a bold, blue, sans-serif font, with 'in' in a smaller size than 'PARIS'.

Poster:

Here is a poster I created to market the festival 'Broke in Paris'. I wanted the poster to incorporate the colours of the logo and photographs which I had taken of Paris. The poster includes key information about the festival, activities which will take place and contact information through social media. I am really pleased with the outcome of this design and feel it mirrors the festival's identity.
